THE DAY AT THE NORMAL

This morning at the chapel hour the W. C. T. U. of Ada made the formal presentation of a likeness of Miss Frances Willard, one of the founders and greatest leader of the great order which has wielded such a potent influence in the temperance cause throughout the world.

The program consisted of a piano solo by Miss Cecile Hindman, an address from Senator Roddie on the influence of the W. C. T. U. with the legislatures of Oklahoma, a vocal solo by Miss Mollie McMillan, accompanied by Miss Ruth Gibson, a reading by Mrs. M. L. Perkins, a sketch of Miss Willard by Mrs. R. O. Wheeler, and a short and impressive address of presentation by Mrs. U. G. Winn. The program concluded with a prayer by Rev. C. L. Brooks.

The enrollment of the normal is now 604, the largest in the history of the school at any one time, and the school is moving along very smoothly.

This evening the famous normal band will give a concert from the balcony of the auditorium, and as all who have heard these musicians play can testify, the concert will be well worth hearing.

TARIFF BILL ALMOST READY

MAY BE SUBMITTED TO SENATE
BY JULY 2.

Washington, June 12.—The Democrats of the Senate Finance Committee today adopted the free sugar and free wool provisions of the House tariff bill. It was not a unanimous decision, there being several dissenting votes. Those who opposed free sugar and free wool offered amendments seeking to reduce the sugar tariff with no provision for putting it on the free list any time, while those who opposed free wool offered a motion to reduce the duty on wool to 15 per cent.

It was not possible to learn how the vote stood on free sugar or free wool, but chairman Simmons intimated that opposition within the committee is now ended and that all factions will support the decision of the majority of the party. The committee made some amendment on other parts of the wool schedule and adopted the pottery schedule with various modifications. One of these increases protection on the lower grade of window glass. Another amendment adopted today puts asphalt on the free list.

A canvass of the situation as it rests now with the full majority membership of the committee and the subcommittee under Senator Williams, which is still at work on the administrative sections, shows that the most pessimistic estimates of the day when a report of the whole bill could be made to the Senate were not as bad as the reality. The subcommittee now hopes for nothing better than to conclude its labors by next Monday so at best the democratic caucus can not begin consideration of the bill as amended by the democrats of the finance committee before the middle of next week.

A week is the least allowed by Senators for the work of the caucus. Senator Kern of Indiana, the majority leader, said today that he would not call a caucus until the committee investigating strike conditions in West Virginia has returned. He is equally anxious that the subcommittee of the committee on judiciary now investigating the alleged lobby should conclude its labors before the caucus begins its consideration. While Senator Simmons dislikes the idea of this delay all agree that an effort must be made to have every democrat at the caucus meeting so that all will be bound to support the caucus bill.

It is pointed out that votes will be coming up in caucus at all times when ever debate on a particular paragraph ends. If senators are absent at committee meetings when a vote is taken they are not bound on that item and it is this kind of escape that Mr. Kern wishes to avoid. The other leaders think that Mr. Kern overemphasizes the importance of the investigation, but it is likely that an effort will be made to count the votes of senators occupied with committee work.

Today's estimates are that the caucus if it begins consideration of the bill by June 25, which is about the earliest hoped for, may dispose of the bill by July 2. This would mean that the measure would not be reported to the senate until after the Fourth of July and debate at best could not begin before July 5. It is considered certain that it will last almost through August.

A WORD FROM W. H. MURRAY

OPPOSES CAMPBELL RUSSELL'S INITIATED BILL TO ELIMI-NATE SILENT VOTE.

Washington, D. C., June 13.—Wm. H. Murray, Congressman at Large from Oklahoma and President of the Constitutional Convention, gave out the following statement today:

"I have had an opportunity of reading the proposed amendment to the Constitution of Oklahoma, seeking, as its advocates say, to eliminate the 'silent vote.' I want to enter my solemn protest against this proposed amendment, notwithstanding Campbell Russell's advocacy thereof, as chairman of the P. P. L., so-called, for the reasons, first:

"This is a proposition to amend by adding an extra section to take the place of Section 4 of Article XXIV of the Constitution, which article refers wholly to the method of amending the Constitution itself. If it referred to Section 3 of Article V, which relates to the initiative and referendum measures, I would not offer objection, for should a law or statute be enacted by less than a majority of the votes it would not prove so dangerous, because it could be amended, modified or even repealed by the legislature, but should a Constitutional amendment be submitted and prove bad it would require a vote of the people and the entailing of great expense. It is a great burden to get up an initiative or referendum petition, and no one can do it unless money is contributed therefor or unless the person procuring such petition is wealthy enough to bear the expense. No provision of our constitution should be amended without a clear majority of the people voting affirmatively therefor, and that is the requirement of the constitution now.

"If an element fail to vote and yet they vote in the election, it is largely because they do not understand the question, and it is the duty of advocates of changes in our Constitution to discuss and argue the proposed change sufficiently that a majority of the people may become converted to that doctrine.

"I was the first to get hit by this provision, when the 'Torrens Land System' was submitted. But I do not complain, because it is imperatively necessary that the question be so thoroughly known by the people that a majority of them stand for it, and if I cannot convert them it will be because the question is without merit. To hold to my other doctrine is to deny the final supremacy of right and to deny government by a majority.

"From my experience and from reading history of governments, I have known but few exceptions to the rule that a majority may be trusted, but a plurality or a faction can never be trusted. It is true that the constitution of the United States is too difficult to amend; first, too difficult to submit an amendment, because it requires two-thirds of both houses of Congress and three-fourths of the states to ratify. But should we go to the other extreme and provide that less than a majority can amend the Constitution? The Oklahoma Constitution is the easiest amended, for it can be amended by a majority of both houses of the legislature submitting an amendment, and when so submitted it is not subject to the governor's veto, or fifteen per cent of the voters may submit an amendment—submit it for the purpose of discussion and adoption when a majority become converted to that doctrine. And other rule would prove dangerous, especially in view of the fact that we have a good Constitution.

"I can see where the fellow who wants to change the corporation provision and the fellow who wants to repeal the prohibition law and the fellow who wants to put in "woman suffrage," and other men that want to destroy the entire Constitution would want an easy method, so that little publicity would be made of an amendment, as was proven last fall in one state where one twentieth of the entire vote of the state ratified an amendment. I sometimes become weary with the continuous howl from certain sources to destroy the only thing in our state government that all citizens should be proud of—the Constitution and our educational institutions. I am not very proud of many administrative acts. I am not particularly proud of many legislative acts of our state government, but I am proud of our constitution and our educational institutions, and I shall deeply regret when either are destroyed in their integral make-up, and I trust the citizens of the state will refuse to sign the petition submitted to change the method of amending the constitution, and particularly, when a special election is called in August, that they will vote "no" and settle for all time to come the continuous efforts to destroy the Constitution of our state."

Tulsa has met many discouragements in her Dry Farming Congress enterprise, but those fellows are made of stuff that cannot be easily crushed and they are bringing things their way in spite of everything. They have never yet failed on a proposition and we don't think they will fail this time. We confidently expect to see this meeting prove the most successful in the history of the organization.

Bill Murray's head is certainly level on the question of eliminating the silent vote on initiated measures as proposed by Campbell Russell. With that safeguard removed Oklahoma would indeed be at the mercy of an active minority that would in time just about wreck the state. Unless the percentage of voters necessary to initiate a measure is raised so that it will be harder to put a bill through, we certainly need the silent vote as a safe guard.

CAN WE ABOLISH THE STATE NORMALS.

Can we abolish the State Normals? No!

Take the state normal in our own county and there are now somewhere between 450 and 500 students (teachers) who have enrolled in the summer school. These people are students at the Normal but they teach during the winter terms, and in order that they may be fully capable and thoroughly up in their work they have got to study and keep posted on the progressiveness of their line of business in order to teach a successful school and teach the things of today and not the things of 25 or 50 years ago. Do you want your children to go to a teacher who is not progressive, one who teaches the lessons of your boyhood days or do you want them to go to one who continually studies and is posted in the changes which occur every year. This is only one of the many things which can be put before you for your consideration and is a worthy one to occupy your thought. The Normal is doing good work in this line and do you not think we should keep it going? Some of those who are opposed to retaining these Normals will say that the taxes are so high to keep it up, and if they are abolished it will reduce the taxes. The small amount you have to pay out to maintain these institutions will hardly be missed and if you did not have to pay it out for that purpose you would spend it for something else that would do you very little good and any one else no good at all and why not put that small amount to some advantage?—Stonewall News.

The Carpetbagger Makes a Hit.

The Rush Stock Co. added fresh laurels to its reputation Thursday evening with its rendition of Opie Reed's Carpetbagger.

As Gov. Crance, H. E. Rush was every inch the crafty, greedy carpetbagger of history, and his awakening at the call of love and making restitution was extremely human.

T. A. Gleason as Maj. Reynolds, the democratic candidate who overthrew the carpetbag regime, caught the attention of the audience and held it. He portrayed in a masterful manner the old time Southern gentleman and entered into the spirit of the part in a manner most appealing to a southern audience.

C. Blundele, as Lummers, the governor's secretary, was also very much at home in his part and carried it out perfectly.

J. Connely as Willits, the political boss, was another type of the olden days, as well as of our own. He was the real article in this character.

Roy, the impressionable youth, who had a fancy for fighting Indians, and Nellie, the governor's daughter, were splendidly portrayed by E. Taulhaber and Miss Lillian Gardner. The boy of course fell in love with the young lady and then there was no more Indian fighting for him.

W. Wing as Jim, the governor's negro servant, was a first class burnt cork artist.

Miss Virginia Herald, as the Southern lady who turned the heart of the carpetbag governor and awakened his slumbering manhood, was exceptionally fine in her interpretation of this role.

Miss May Willis as the lobbyist in the guise of a book agent, was most charming.

The play for this evening will be Cinderella.

SUGAR MEN SPENT MONEY

ALSO USED FRANKING PRIVILEGE IN FIGHT ON FREE SUGAR.

Washington, June 12.—The sugar men themselves today in their testimony made good President Wilson's assertion that the tariff lobby is spending an immense amount of money, just as Senator Penrose and others several days ago confirmed the charge that the lobby is unusually large.

The sugar men gave evidence that hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent in the fight against free sugar. It was also brought out that more than a million pieces of literature in favor of a duty on sugar have been sent out under the franks of senators. The most striking proof of the "pull" of the anti-free sugar lobby in the senate was afforded by testimony that charts prepared by Truman G. Palmer, secretary of the Beet Sugar Association and for more than ten years Washington representative of that interest, had been accepted as authentic and reliable by no less a statesman than Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and used by him in a speech he delivered in the senate advocating the sugar tariff.

Not only did Senator Lodge make use of the statistics and charts prepared by the Washington representative of the beet sugar interests in a speech in the senate, but he afterward allowed these statistics and charts to be sent out by the hundreds of thousands under his congressional frank to all the beet sugar people in working up sentiment favorable to the retention of the sugar tariff.

By the use of Senator Lodge's frank Senator Reed of the investigating committee figured out, the beet sugar people had saved about $16,000 which they otherwise would have had to pay out of their own pocket as United States postage on pamphlets sent out. Even with this saving, according to the testimony of Mr. Palmer, their expenditures through him in the ten years he had been their representative here were generous, not to say lavish. He admitted that more than $160,000 had passed through his hands in the fight against reducing or wiping out the sugar duties, which fight began in 1901 with the movement for reciprocity with Cuba.

But this was not all the beet sugar

PRESIDENT WILSON

Campaign, Ill., June 12.—With tears in his eyes as he made what he said was "perhaps his last speech," Uncle Joe Cannon made the address dedicating the $160,000 court house at Tuscola today, the place where he started in life fifty-nine years ago. He received a remarkable demonstration. In the seats of honor were gray-haired survivors of the war, whose presence inspired the former speaker to a tribute to the Blue and the Gray.

The ex-speaker declared he did not intend to make a political speech, but he discussed woman suffrage, Woodrow Wilson, Theodore Roosevelt, the recall of judicial decisions, the chances of the democratic party and kindred topics.

Discussing woman's suffrage, Mr. Cannon said: "I believe that the proposition, if put to the women of Illinois, would be lost by 5,000 votes. But, now that we are going to have it it will be a great time for an awfully handsome man to run for office."

Uncle Joe said he liked Woodrow Wilson. "In the first place, the president is Scotch-Irish; so is Cannon. Then I like his jaw. It is about like this," and Uncle Joe tangled his fingers to illustrate the underslung effect of the Wilson jaw.

"Anyone who says Wilson is a fool is a fool himself. Wilson is a sincere patriot."

Speaking against the recall, he said: "Dishonest Judges are as scarce as needles in haystacks. If we ever cease to have an honest judiciary, why, good bye. There are fewer dishonest men on the bench than in any other calling, according to number, yet they are threatened."

MEETING OF YOUNG DEMOCRATS SATURDAY

To the Members of the Executive and Finance Committees and District Chairmen of Young Men's League of Democratic Clubs of Oklahoma: Owing to the fact that there seems little probability of a redistricting bill being passed by the State Legislature at this session, I feel that the work of organizing Clubs should be delayed no longer and for that reason I am announcing the appointments for the various committees and issuing a call for a meeting of certain committees.

The call is hereby made for a meeting of the members of the Executive and Finance Committees and the District Chairmen, to be held at the Lee-Huckins hotel in Oklahoma City, on Saturday afternoon, June 14, 1913, at 3 o'clock.

It has been my earnest endeavor to ignore all so-called factional lines within our party, in choosing the members of these committees, applying at all times the rule of progressive democracy and ability to perform, to the men chosen from the ranks of the younger element of democracy. I feel that these committees have been filled with exceptionally able members and cannot but view the prospect before us with the greatest optimism.

This may be the only meeting of the committees held during the year. Plans for our future work will be outlined and some matters disposed of which have developed since the state Convention, that are of much importance to our organization.

of David Kerr

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Gloria Kerr, a motherless girl who has spent most of her life at school, arrives at her father's home in Belmont. David Kerr is the political boss of the town and is anxious to prevent his daughter learning of his real character.

CHAPTER II—Kendall, representing the Chicago packers, is negotiating with Judge Gilbert, Kerr's chief adviser, for a valuable franchise. They fear the opposition of Joe Wright, editor of the reform paper.

CHAPTER III—Kerr asks the assistance of Judge Gilbert in introducing Gloria to Belmont society and promises to help him put through the packers' franchise and let him have all the graft.

CHAPTER IV—Gloria meets Joe Wright at the Gilberts. It appears they are on intimate terms, having met previously in a touring party in Europe.

CHAPTER V—Gloria twists Wright on his failure to keep an engagement to meet her in Paris. He explains that the death of his mother prevented his going to Paris.

CHAPTER VI—The Gilberts invite Gloria to stay with them pending the furnishing of the Kerr home.

CHAPTER VII—One society bud who refused to meet Gloria is forced to do so when her father is made to feel Kerr's power.

CHAPTER VIII—Wright begins his fight against the proposed franchise in the columns of his paper, the Belmont News.

This remark served only to punctuate the silence. It seemed to him, from the length of time before she replied, that Gloria was mentally inspecting the records of the weather bureau for the last twenty years.

"Yes," she said, a word that did not appear so ponderous as to require all that time to bring it forth.

This did not prove conducive to further conversation. He felt that the weather had not been exhausted by her voluble reply, however, and used it again.

"They tell me it's liable to be bad for another month."

Again Gloria seemed to make a mental survey of all the weather records of the last twenty years. Wright had almost forgotten what he had said when she at last gave the conversation football a dainty kick by saying:

"Yes," She Said.

"Yes."

This time he was ready for her. His embarrassment was wearing off and he began again promptly:

"Don't the rains make the road pretty bad out your way?"

"My friends manage to get out to see me."

This was a chill rejoinder, and Wright felt he had lost several points in their game of indirection.

"Locust Lawn is quite a distance out," he ventured.

"Not far enough to discourage my friends."

This goaded him to an apology. He regretted that she was not making it easy for him, but he forgave her because he knew she did not understand.

"Because I've been so busy, please don't think that I'm discouraged."

"Why should I think of it at all?" she replied with spirit.

Her remark hurt him, both her words and her manner of speech. It tore away his reserve and made him burst forth in protest.

"That's not like you, Gloria. We've been such good friends."

"We have been good friends," she admitted promptly. "Is there any reason, Joe, why I should not be now?"

His heart beat high within him at her words. They were so direct, so honest, so like the one woman of his dreams. It grieved him that he could not be as direct with her; but that was impossible, for over them was the sinister shadow of David Kerr, her father, the boss of Belmont.

"There's no reason why we shouldn't be good friends, Gloria. What put that idea into your head?"

"My circle of friends in Belmont seems to have grown smaller and smaller."

"Please don't put me on the outside."

"You seem to have put yourself there."

The conversation lagged. There was so much to think about. Gloria was seeking to reconcile his explanations with her own observations. Looking at him closely she saw that he did not have that fresh, robust look which a month ago had made him seem fit for a gladiatorial contest. As he sat in the big office chair he seemed to relax with fatigue. His face was thinner, and there were little lines of worry about his eyes. Between his brows and on either side his mouth were to be seen creases which the girl thought proclaimed to the world his strength of character. A month ago she had not noticed them. She had felt he was such a man, but the wrinkles, confirming her belief, could almost be called a source of joy to her. They had made away with some of the youthfulness, but in his face she now saw something which more than compensated. It had greater strength now, strength such as was written on her father's countenance.

"You look tired." Her low, sympathetic tones and her solicitous look did what nothing else could do. They melted his stern purpose to bear it all in silence for yet a few days into a desire to take her as much as he dared into his confidence. With a woman's quick perception she would understand that he was unhappy. Her sympathy and her confidence in him would nerve him to fight the good fight as nothing else could and his heart was stirred by the possibility.

"Yes," he admitted, "I'm tired and sick at heart."

"Why don't you take a vacation? Go to Europe."

"I can't pick up and run away like that; but I'd do it anyway if it would bring back the dear old days."

"The days I knew?" the girl made bold to ask.

"The days you made so—delightful."

"Can they be gone forever?"

"You mean—" Wright did not dare to put his hope in words.

Carried farther than she had intended, Gloria beat a retreat by saying:

"Who knows? We may meet in Paris again some day."

"Some time soon, I hope. I'm sick and tired of it all here, Gloria. Today it has seemed like the game isn't worth the candle. What do you think?"

"I'm all in the dark, too," was her confession. Slowly and surely in the shadow of her shattered hopes and his unhappy conflict of duty and desire were they being drawn closer together than even they had been when they laughed with the spring and dreamed of the days to come in a radiant sunshine of unwhispered love.

"I don't know what to think," Gloria went on in a low tone. "I don't seem to understand Belmont."

"Why don't you go away? Don't you want to?"

"What for? I know the life out there." She made a sweeping gesture which seemed to encompass all the world outside the four walls which shut them in together. "It wouldn't really satisfy me any more—to live as I used to live."

"Yet your life here—" He left the rest to her.

"No, this doesn't satisfy me either."

"In a word, Gloria, you're not happy."

Instead of replying directly, she asked with a drooping of her hands to her sides in a hopeless fashion:

"Is anybody in the whole world happy? Are you happy?"

"Don't you think I am?"

"I'm afraid not."

The appealing way she looked at him, her whole soul welling up in her eyes, brought him to his feet and set him to pacing nervously up and down. He looked fatigued, distressed, beside himself with care. She forgave him everything but his studied refusal to let her share whatever weighed upon him. Could he not see, she thought, how she yearned to tell him that whither he went there she would go also, that his joys would be all her joys and that his burdens would be divided with her, that love divided all sorrow and doubled all joy?

Wright could stand it no longer. He saw her before him, trembling with that same emotion that shook him, aflame with the same fire that burned within him, mutely questioning him with her big, soulful eyes. How could he make amends for that month of neglect except by telling her what she long ago had guessed, but what more recently she had a right to doubt? He felt weak where he wanted to be strong. To hear from her lips that she loved him was all that he needed to make him invincible. With her acknowledged love in his heart there was nothing he could not do.

"Oh, Gloria, I can't tell you what a fight I'm making. You wouldn't understand. Business is business, outside a woman's realm, but I've missed you so much this last month."

At this declaration she caught her breath. Joy, she found, could sometimes prove the twin of pain. That this man, this strong, fearless man, in his struggles had missed her, had intimated a longing for dependence upon her, made her heart bound. Love, even when his banners have been flung forth to the breeze leagues before the castle wall is reached, never ceases to be a surprise when at last the knock at the gate is heard.

"You've no right to say your work is outside of woman's realm if you've—if you've missed something a woman could supply."

"Something the one woman could supply," he corrected.

"I must be going," she said, rising from her chair; "I'm afraid Mrs. Hayes isn't coming."

He stepped between her and the

"No, Gloria, you must hear me. I didn't mean to speak now, of all times, but it had to be some day, and perhaps it is all for the best now."

The woman leaned her hand upon the table for support, turning half away from him.

"Don't Joe, please don't," she murmured. "I must go."

"No, no, I must tell you. You've asked me if you could help me. I want you to help me; you can help me always. I love you. I want you to be my wife. I have loved you, oh, so long; and, most of all, I've felt that you have needed me. Don't tell me that it was just selfishness, dear, that made me feel that my protecting arms should be about you always. Love is love, a law unto itself alone. We must recognize it and bow to it, because it brings us happiness."

He came a step nearer, but she did not turn to him. She stood half turned away, her eyes downcast, her lips parted into half a smile. Her breath came fast and she could feel her heart beat. Then she heard him say in a lower tone, so gently:

"Nothing to say, Gloria? Can't you believe me?"

She turned to find herself gazing into his eyes.

"Yes, I believe in you—as I believe in my father."

This answer was not enough. He had asked her to be his wife. Not yet had she replied.

"Say that you care for me, Gloria; tell me that you love me."

"I've always cared, Joe; I do love you."

"For better or worse?" He held out his arms.

Mother's Advice To Her Daughter

A Real Live Doll to Fondle Is Woman's Greatest Happiness.

One of the most important matters about which women concern themselves is their future status as a grandmother. And she is wisdom itself who knows of or learns of that famous remedy, Mother's Friend. This is an external application for the abdominal muscles and breasts. It certainly has a wonderful influence, allays all fear, banishes all pain, is a most grateful encouragement to the young, expectant mother, and permits her to go through the period happy in mind, free in body and thus destined to anticipate woman's greatest happiness as nature intended she should. The action of Mother's Friend makes the muscles free, pliant and responsive to expansion. Thus all strain and tension upon the nerves and ligaments is avoided, and in place of a period of discomfort and consequent dread, it is a season of calm repose, and joyful expectation.

There is no nausea, no morning sickness, no nervous twitching, none of that constant strain known to so many women, hence Mother's Friend is really one of the greatest blessings that could be devised. This splendid and certain remedy can be had of any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and is sure to prove of inestimable value, not only upon the mother, but upon the health and future of the child. Write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 132 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their book to expectant mothers.
